DAS, partners educate teens

Surge in aging population creates demand for more professionals

Which career field is surging to meet population demand and offers opportunities for people at nearly every level of education? The answer is aging, and professionals are reaching out to ever-younger audiences to build tomorrow's workforce. During the 2017-2018 school year, the Division of Aging Services (DAS) partnered with the Georgia Gerontology Society to help the Georgia Department of Labor educate teens about aging careers.

The two aging organizations provided support to the Department of Labor's Jobs for Georgia Graduates (JGG) program by mobilizing professionals to speak to JGG high school students about career options in aging services. The student groups learned about growth in the aging field; several vocational paths; and ways to prepare academically for administrative, direct care, research, and allied professions.

"I had the opportunity to attend one of the presentations and was amazed at the information that was shared on the various career opportunities in the field. It is extremely important that we expose our JGG students to careers and opportunities that they are not aware of in order to provide them with options," said Nedra Wakefield, project director for the Jobs for Georgia Graduates program. "We look forward to the continued partnership and exploring other opportunities that may expose our JGG students to careers in Aging."

▲ The Division of Aging Services has teamed up with its partners to teach the next generation of professionals about careers in aging.

JGG is a statewide school-to-work transition program launched by the Department of Labor in 1990. During the past year, more than a dozen high schools participated in JGG by enrolling promising students who faced potential vocational and/or personal barriers to employment. JGG students benefit from employability skills training; counseling; advisement; club activities; mentoring; college, job, or military placement; and follow-up services over an average five-year period.

The initiative has created budding relationships between aging organizations and high schools. "We learned how to improvise on the fly if needed, and used real life experiences, which seemed to further enlighten the students about aging careers," said Toni Williams of the Three Rivers Area Agency on Aging, who co-presented with her colleague, Betty Pendleton. "[We] also established a partnership with Newnan High School in which our wellness coordinator, a licensed dietitian, will also speak with the students in a nutrition class."

As presenters noted, the best way for teens to learn about aging professionals' daily experiences is to volunteer. While most Area Agencies on Aging have limited opportunities available to minors, teens can pursue service projects through vocational clubs, community

CSRA elder rights conference puts spotlight on benefits trafficking

Georgia Bureau of Investigation (GBI) Director Vernon M. Keenan headlined "Trafficking Adults and their Benefits: Hiding in Plain Sight," the CSRA AAA's 10th annual elder rights conference, held at Augusta's Trinity on the Hill United Methodist Church.

The event attracted hundreds of regional residents and state leaders working together to prevent the exploitation of vulnerable adults.

Taking Elder Abuse Seriously (TEAS), a network of CSRA advocates and professionals, fuels regional prevention efforts and played a key role in organizing this year's conference.

TEAS members analyze and tackle community issues that threaten the rights of elders; represent older Georgians and adults with disabilities in advisory and policy-making bodies; strengthen relationships among law enforcement, leaders, and mandatory reporters; and educate the public about abuse detection and prevention.

More than two dozen CSRA organizations collaborated to make the 2018 event compelling and productive.

To learn more about the CSRA Elder Rights Conference and explore how you can develop a strong advocacy network in your community, contact Jeanette Cummings of the CSRA Regional Commission Area Agency on Aging at 706-210-2013 or jcummings@csrarc.ga.gov.

youth groups, nursing homes and assisted living communities, and family volunteering programs.

Academic training for aging careers can take from one to several years, depending on a student's career interests. The Division of Aging Services' links list of gerontology degree programs and coursework, found at aging.ga.gov, features several Georgia colleges and universities that offer training to future aging services practitioners.

The three partners agree that the successful 2017-2018 project is a building block for more collaboration between aging professionals and schools. Together, the organizations will ensure that Georgia will be staffed and ready to shine one of the nation's best places to thrive for a lifetime.

IN BRIEF

Middle Georgia celebrates Older Americans Month

Each year during the month of May, the Administration on Aging (AOA), part of the Administration for Community Living, celebrates Older Americans Month. The 2018 theme, "Engage at Every Age," emphasized that you are never too old (or young) to take part in activities that can enrich your physical, mental, and emotional well-being. In honor of the national observance, the Middle Georgia Regional Commission / Area Agency on Aging hosted an annual Senior Day Expo at the Georgia National Fairgrounds in Perry. With more than 1,000 older adults and community resource providers in attendance, the event was a grand celebration. Seniors engaged in an agenda packed with physical activities, socialization, information, and door prizes. Many thanks go to individual attendees, senior groups, faith-based organizations, corporate vendors and sponsors, local talent participants, and community celebrities whose contribution made the day a tremendous success.

ACT training coordinator earns CECFE distinction

David F. Blake of the DAS Forensic Special Initiatives Unit (FSIU) has been approved as a Certified Economic Crime Forensic Examiner (CECFE) by the National White Collar Crime Center.

David, a retired DeKalb County law enforcement officer, joined FSIU in 2010 and coordinates the Adult Crime Tactics (ACT) training for law enforcement, financial professionals, emergency personnel, and members of the justice system.

ACT training, which has been lauded nationally, helps key professionals become more effective at recognizing, preventing, and prosecuting the abuse, neglect, and exploitation of vulnerable adults.

Sylvania Women's Club 'plants' ribbons to raise awareness for older and disabled adults

For World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, the GFWC Sylvania Junior Woman's Club, part of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, displayed educational signage plus dozens of purple ribbons outdoors to raise awareness about the abuse of older adults and adults with disabilities. The organization expanded its efforts in June with "Elder Abuse Awareness and Prevention," presented by Brenda Boyd and Penny Walden of the CSRA Adult Protective Services (APS) team and Rachel Eggleston, Administrator of a local nursing home.

"I, as well as my club, hope to bring awareness to serious topics to the residents of our rural community," said Tora Dale Reddick, a dedicated local volunteer and member of the APS team serving the Heart of Georgia. The Club also educates the public about child abuse, domestic violence, teen dating violence, sexual assault, and other issues of concern as they work to educate, protect, and empower Screven County residents.

Bank marks World Elder Abuse Awareness Day

Employees of Citizens Bank and Trust Company in Eastman spread awareness about elder abuse with a busy day of public education on June 15. To observe World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, staff members wore purple, distributed public information flyers, and spoke with customers about abuse issues. "[Customers] were all very excited about us taking out the time to help spread awareness," said Citizens Bank's Mallory Guyton. "This is the second year for us being able to participate and I must admit this year was a whole lot better than the first. I'm hoping each year we can grow and hopefully do something better than the year before. Thanks for allowing us to participate in such a wonderful event."

NEW FEATURES
Area Plan	Area Plan	A new feature, Area Plans, is now available. The Area Plans feature was designed for use by State Units on Aging and/or AAAs. Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs) were created under federal mandate in 1973. They are charged with developing, coordinating, and delivering home- and community-based services to Americans 60 and over, making it possible for older adults to remain in their homes and communities as they continue to age. The Administration for Community Living (ACL) allocates funds to each state's unit on aging (SUA) which then distributes the funds to the AAAs. In return, each AAA must create a comprehensive area plan every 4 years and an annual fiscal plan. The annual fiscal plan and the services delivered against it serve as the basis on which the SUA pays/reimburses the AAA. The SUA also rolls the data up across all of its AAAs to fulfill its annual reporting requirements to ACL (NAPIS/SRT reporting). This feature supports the creation, approval, amendment, and payment of annual fiscal plans. There are several standard reports that have been designed to support this feature: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Area Plans Funding Source Definitions • Area Plan Budget Summary by Program (with Provider) • Area Plan Budget Summary by Program
